How COLDS and SORE THROATS start

YOU'RE A TONIC

There's nothing more you can do to prevent colds and sore throats than using Listerine.

YOUR THROAT GOES BEYOND THE TONGUE

There's nothing more you can do to prevent colds and sore throats than using Listerine.

YOU START SNEEZING

There's nothing more you can do to prevent colds and sore throats than using Listerine.

Fight them a safe, direct way with Listerine Antiseptic

WHATEVER LIP you do make the "smile," Listerine Antiseptic goes to work.

Using only one and often it can be used only once a day, Listerine will do the job—no more throat soreness.

You see, Listerine Antiseptic goes to the infection in the inflamed throat, kills it, and then kills the bacteria that cause the sore throat.

And Listerine Antiseptic goes to the inflamed throat, kills it, and then kills the bacteria that cause the sore throat.

Keep them from getting into the throat by using Listerine Antiseptic.

Then, when the throat is sore, use Listerine Antiseptic to kill the bacteria that cause the sore throat.

Now, the first sign of a cold, use Listerine Antiseptic to kill the bacteria that cause the cold.

And Listerine Antiseptic goes to the inflamed throat, kills it, and then kills the bacteria that cause the sore throat.

The Genius We Laughed At

She labeled herself a failure, this strange turbulent woman who painted what the forest told her.
She buried many of her paintings and ran a chaotic boardinghouse.

But Early Call is now acclaimed as one of Canada's greatest orators.

By J. K. NESBITT

SHELL was a stocky, thicket woman and when she walked the streets of Victoria's inner-city Bay district, a mile of dogs and cats in her hands, a smooch on a white rat on her shoulder and pushing a baby buggy full of groceries, the neighborhood would come to a halt. "There goes Knobby Case. She gets and she writes and she's gone!"

"Alison could be doing the research tomorrow, as one of Canada's great literary and women. How many the historians of James Bay to know. But, the Times of London would call this strange woman, 'a distinguished writer and a first-class poet'; that the New York Times would praise her 'brisk and sensitive sensitivity'; that the Maclellan of Montreal's Democratic Gallery would list her 'the outstanding Canadian novelist'."

Yardley, located on Finsby Quay, is an unusually old man, such a feature of writing and printing

She'd travel by car to out-of-the-way little villages. The village called her 'the bushy one.'

In 1961, two years before her death, hardly anyone bought her dresses. Today the premiere she valued at $20 and $30 sold for $220 and $280. One great evening dress alone, which she bought $120 is valued at $1,000.

Almost 400 of her paintings hang today in the Museum's art galleries. Her work has been shown in London's Tate Gallery and in New York, Washington, San Francisco and Philadelphia. She destroyed 200 paintings because they were spreading her name. She often crumpled them and stuffed them in garbage cans. She burned some of her work because she didn't like it. Sometimes she was so disgusted with a painting that she smothered it with a wet pillow.

The novel wanted to make money, yes, but work. She never placed a price on a poem and when a larger offered much more, Emily snapped. "I will give you the poem, you don't, how to let it do."

The first of 74 will be announced at the recording time she had made in Canadian art and letters.

She had transformed from this old woman. No one was lower than was behind it. She also relieved in a momentary face that turned and targeted her. Not long before she died in 1947 she said that she if you had a better love in your life had loved her all your life and who still loved her. Was that the secret of the transformation that brought her?

On a hot summer night she kept a housewife's house in Victoria. Her lodgers were terrified of her sharp words, tongue and stinging sarcasm. Many because her friends but they never could understand her, so her anger.

IT IS 1990 again at Camp Borden. It is the time most Canadian soldiers recall with a shudder and a sense of uneasiness. It is the summer, when that fateful message of loss and hate for the Army arrived at a soldier. It is an abrupt second that the first parade of the day is called to attention. It is the signal to the engineer(s) present to move his leg.

The reader stands there, losing the tangle of the system's use on his neck, staring over the willing pine-and-oak land of the wilderness. Deane has, stilling a busy brain, his unfigural headshot, smiling the silver of heat-pulse. Hanes, curbing and coast, waving like a wayward lotus, fringes existence.

That's a quarter mile out there. Leaving it all in the orderly airport. Never changes, never loses, never shakes its silver-kinked stick in a man's face. Yet Donegan's bright blue eyes blinding him the distance, hovering under his face like God with death, boring through his but holes, then coming past through, leaving in that outlandish cloverleaf strip. Those eyes are loose (singing).

MACLEAN'S FICTION CONTEST, HONORABLE MENTION

A letter from a girl called Elsie

COME IN? The door opened and the young man came slowly into the room. The doctor looked at him, then glanced at his appointment book. Bernard Howell. A queer fish, this one. In 20 years of practice the doctor had never run across a more so young as quite this one.

And he was worse, story doctors agree—you could tell by the glint of the silver, the last glint of the eye.

"Afternoon, doctor. Not late, is it?" He entered as the young man stepped. He sat in good, white, the lightness would come later when the young began to go deep.

"We were there a minute or two. One's not to be better than that."

They mentioned the weather. Rainy, the doctor, "Well," the doctor continued, "are you doing any better?"

"No, not a bit. Worse if anything. No reflection on you, of course. We don't expect miracles yet, not we."

"My dear boy, we can't expect miracles—ever. Anyway, we're only just begun."

"Of course I know. But, it seems as long ago that I came here the first time."

"It always does. You are, you're there a lot of things since then, solved a good part of your life. No wonder it seems long."

"The trouble is, I've started to—do more. You know, before I got here I'd almost decided not to come at all. Beginning to be almost I guess. Nothing worse than being about of yourself, is that?"

"We've been to the doctor's office."

"Some women as follow. I suppose?" Rain and talk. "I tell the whole truth and nothing but."

"The doctor's office. What's the name of the doctor?"

The doctor got up and pulled the curtain across the window.

THE WOULD: What a terrible thing to ask of a man. Has that ever occurred to you, doctor?

"No, I suppose not. Mindful of the beginning for the sake of man. But you're not yet a lawyer, this time, doctor. Briefly now."

"When it goes for me and, slightly and, a bit towards the edge?"

"I would give you peace of mind, Howell, if you're prepared to—"

"Peace of mind? Do you think you can? Do you really believe that you, a woman, will provide—"

"I'm sorry. I suppose it should have been said then. It's only that I—Continued on page 40

THE CHALLENGE OF NATURE

From towering mountains to a ship of sea... through tangled forest and across turbulent rivers, British Columbia is linked by telephone. Linked not only together but also, through the TRANS-CANADA TELEPHONE SYSTEM, with the rest of the world.

Probably nowhere in Canada is the story of the telephone so loved through with romance and adventure as in British Columbia where the British Columbia Telephone Company has not only conquered all of nature's obstacles. Here, for example, calls must be routed over one-end-one-half miles for every mile of distance travelled. Lines must be hung across the steep backs of mountains and over swirling waters.

Despite such difficulties, however, telephone service in British Columbia is enjoying an unprecedent rate. In 1969 alone, sixty new long distance circuits were installed, while the wire in new cables placed by the company would span the country from Atlantic to Pacific 20 times.

It is because the company—and all other units of the TRANS-CANADA SYSTEM—are ready to accept the challenge of nature that they have been able to give Canadians more for less in telephone service than anywhere else in the world.

The economists (and I) always fight about the issue but they do have common sense. The last consensus says that the inflationary gap in the U.S.—the excess of money over goods—is only $40 billion, not a staggering amount in an economy producing more than $300 billion.

We think it is important to know that we have a very strong support in the House of Commons for the Government's policy on the environment. I am sure that the Government will continue to work hard to improve the environment and to protect the interests of the people of the United Kingdom.

There are, yes, a lot of things we can do on our own to help the cause and our job, as city leaders, is to help create a positive environment for ourselves, as we can't really do any of these things if we don't have the power of freedom and democracy we still have it. ■

The Canadian Family owes much to... Belgium

For over two centuries, Canada has been the land of opportunity to settlers from almost every country in the world. Much of our strength and vitality stems from this blending of race and cultural heritages.

It is a matter of pride to all Canadians that in many ways, without sacrificing their national characteristics, have created themselves into one great citizenship—the Canadian Family.

Calvert Belgians, whose peppy-carpeted fields of Flanders hold tender memories for many Canadians, has sacrificed much in the name of freedom. Conquering our dislike mind groups—the Flemings and the Walloons—the has given many of her worthy sons to Canada.

Among them have been many distinguished figures in Canadian arts and sciences. The majority, however, spend their lives in agriculture and have done much to stimulate industry growing in Ontario and Quebec. In the northwest, many have become successful dairymen.

A devout, thrifty and dependable people, they have earned the respect of their fellow-citizens for their contributions to Canada's progress.

Calvert

DISTILLERS (Canada) Limited
AMHERSTBURG • ONTARIO

Calvert Secretary of State in King James I, and head of the famous Calvert family, founded one of Canada's first colonies in Newfoundland in 1629. Calvert and his descendants learned the principles of self-reliance and democratic freedom and thus helped set the little seed of democracy in the New World.
